Special Request.

In answering advertisements appearing in the columns of this paper, or when buying goods from a merchant whose advertisement appears in this paper, our readers are especially requested to state that they saw the advertisement in THE PUBLIC LEDGER. This will cost you nothing, and it will be gratefully appreciated by both the advertiser and the Editor.

THE GREATEST BOY OF ALL.

The boy who leads his class at school, A glorious child is he; We wonder at the boy who plays The violin at three! The little one in kilts who knows His Homer through and through Or quotes from Willie Shakespeare gains Our admiration, too.

But greater far than is the boy Who leads his class, or he That all the world has heard of as An infant prodigy, Is one whose lot is lowly but Whose destiny is high— The office boy who works on while The band is marching by.

—S. E. Kiser.

All matter for publication must be handed in before 9 o'clock a. m.

If you really think it doesn't pay to advertise, will you be kind enough to step into the Beehive for a few moments? That establishment will in one hour sell enough goods extra to pay for a week's insertion of their big advertisement in both Maysville papers.

George Cox & Son, who have been eighty-two years in the drygoods business, have just taken an account of stock. As a matter of course, they found many odds-and-ends of good goods. These have been placed upon "cheap tables," and are offered at real bargains. See ad elsewhere.

Last May the body of a young woman was taken from the river at Cincinnati. The mother of Mary Owens identified it as that of her missing daughter, and it was buried as such. Last Saturday the missing Mary walked in on her mourning mother, the very picture of good health. Which goes to show that some people can be mistaken as well as others.

Messrs. Dawson and Clinger of this city have secured the contract for building the immense smokestack to be built by the Portsmouth Brewing Company. Both men have records in this line of work. Mr. Dawson built the high stack for the Proctor & Gamble Company at Ivorydale and Mr. Clinger built a stack at Middleport that reaches a height of three hundred and fifty feet.

Alex Routt has qualified as Administrator of his son, William Routt, with Allan D. Cole surety. William is supposed to have been killed by a C. and O. train just West of the city some months ago, and this is the initial step toward a suit against the Railway Company. It is among the possibilities of the new Century that the heirs of some person killed by lightning may file a damage suit against the Lord.

TWO GOOD ONES. Anecdotes About That Heroic Kentuckian, General Combs.

Most every one has heard of General Leslie Combs, a hero of the War of 1812, who died a few years ago at Lexington at a very advanced age.

Here are two stories about the old gentleman that haven't been in print for many a day, if ever:

The General had been an attendant upon the preaching of his friend, Robert J. Breckinridge, for a long time, and meeting the latter upon the street one day, he said to the distinguished

Divine, "Bob, I've been going to your Church a good many years now, and I don't believe you've done me any good so I've about made up my mind to go out here and join Dillard's Baptist Church where I can be immersed, and see if it won't help my case."

"Well," said Dr. Breckinridge, "go on; but tell Dillard that if he expects to make anything out of you by immersing you, he will have to soak you over night."

Upon one occasion the General was a suitor for the hand of a rich widow, Mrs. Tubman, and had a rival in Colonel Irvine, a merchant of Richmond.

When the remains of Daniel Boone were brought from Missouri in 1845 for final interment at Frankfort, these two gentlemen and the widow were among those who gathered to do honor to the hero of the "dark and bloody ground."

The day was a pretty sloppy one and the ground was quite slippery.

The lady, with one of these gallants on either side, was standing among the throng, and General Combs was not only trying to appear at his best, but was making his rival appear as ridiculous as he could by remarking upon his blind eye and broken leg, two things that Colonel Irvine possessed.

The General seemed in a fair way to carry the day against Irvine, when in bowing rather low, his feet slipped from under him and down he came upon the wet and muddy ground. He was equal to the emergency, though, for he said to Mrs. Tubman, "Madam, I had fully determined to throw myself at your feet and declare my homage, but I didn't expect to do so in so summary a manner."

Save doctors' bills by giving Foley's Honey and Tar to infants and children in time to prevent pneumonia or croup which are fatal to so many thousands of babies. J. Jas. Wood & Son and Armstrong & Co.

CLAY CLEMENT.

The play, "The New Dominion," typifies the highest conception of manhood and womanhood and casts about the interpreter, Clay Clement, a peculiar luster. Years have not dimmed the poetic beauty and marvelous fascination of Baron Von Hohenstauffen, and his lines still fall upon grateful and friendly ears, when the philosophical nobleman first stumbles over English difficulties. Each succeeding year has only intensified the ability of this admirable actor. Clay Clement develops himself with a characterization that first drew attention by the picturesqueness of its manners. That quality is still apparent, but behind it all is the glowing, burning feeling dominating every instinct. There is all the old honor for woman, the respect for truth, the vindication of justice. Mr. Clement has only matured his art, and his Baron is a masterpiece of art character. There is the carefully studied walk, the accent, grammatical correction, and that which impresses one most of all—the beautiful sincerity, the symbolism of noble life. Washington Opera-house Thursday, January 10th.

Lingering Grippe Cough.

G. Vaclier, 157 Ogden street, Chicago, says: "My wife had a very severe case of la grippe, and it left her with a very bad cough. She tried a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and it gave her immediate relief. A second bottle cured her cough entirely." Price 50c and 75c. J. Jas. Wood & Son and Armstrong & Co.

The names of political candidates can still be hung on campaign flags in spite of all the bills prohibiting the use of the Stars and Stripes for advertising purposes that have been introduced in Congress. None of them has been enacted into law.

Railway whistles inflict torture on so many people that Austria has introduced a system of silent signaling to start and stop the trains. Belgium is trying compressed air whistles instead of steam, and Germany experiments with horns.

An inventor has hit upon a method of putting stone soles on boots and shoes. He mixes a waterproof glue with a suitable quantity of clean quartz sand and spreads it over the leather sole used as a foundation. These quartz soles are said to be very flexible and to give the foot a firm hold even on the most slippery surface.

There is a church bell in Salt Lake City, Utah, which seems to have a peculiar effect on dogs. On Sunday morning, as soon as the bell begins to ring, the canines within hearing distance start in a single file for the Church, in front of which they keep up a howling chorus until the bell stops ringing. No other bell in the city has the same effect.
